

CONTROL THE INNER FLAME

Managing Anger and Emotion

CHOICE

Keep calling anger stress and react late, or name it early, slow the spike, and respond cleanly.

PROMPT

Use this sheet to process one real trigger this week. Track the signal, name the emotion, pause, and choose a measured response. The goal is not to erase anger. The goal is to make anger useful.

CALIBRATE

C Catch the Signal

What did your body do first?

A Acknowledge Anger

Write the exact emotion name.

L Limit the Spike

Which pause did you use?

I Isolate the Cause

What triggered the heat?

B Build a Response

What clean action fits?

R Release Energy

Where will the pressure go?

A Assess Outcome

What changed after control?

T Train the Pattern

What will you repeat next time?

TRIGGER MAP

Likely trigger this week:

Early warning sign:

E Establish Control

Write the sentence you will use to prove control next time.

CONTROL SCORE

Before response, heat level 1 to 10:

After response, heat level 1 to 10:

REFLECTION

Describe one moment where you felt anger rise. What did you call it first, what was it actually, and what changed when you slowed down?

1

SPOT IT

Recognize early anger signals before they build.

2

SLOW IT

Create a pause with breath, space, or movement.

3

USE IT

Choose a clear response instead of reacting late.